

—
OBSERVE AND REPORT

FRANK POZO

POLICE EVALUATOR

Okay Ronnie, today I will be giving you a psychiatric evaluation to determine if you are competent to enter into the police academy. So, lets start with your background. Where are you from?

RONNIE

Born and raised here, actually.

POLICE EVALUATOR

Oh local boy okay! And do you have any history of depression or psychosis or anything like that?

RONNIE

Uh Yeah. But nothing really worth mentioning. Just a little bipolar disorder. No big deal.

POLICE EVALUATOR

Oh. Are you taking any prescription medications?

RONNIE

I am pleased to announce I am currently off of all prescription medications.

POLICE EVALUATOR

Congratulations. Why did the doctors take you off?

RONNIE

They didn't.

POLICE EVALUATOR

How are you feeling?

RONNIE

Great Actually! I met a girl. We're in love. So, that is very good. This close to catching this pervert, catching a robber. Just generally becoming the man. So, this point of my life I feel I can destroy some motherfuckers.

POLICE EVALUATOR

Okay. I'm just going to write that on down.

RONNIE

Yeah! Write it on down.

POLICE EVALUATOR

Okay. Why do you want to become a police officer?

RONNIE

That's a big question now, isn't it? I have a dream most nights. It starts on a playground. There's kids swinging, laughing. Dogs barking. Butterflies flapping their little wings. Then you hear a rumbling. And over the horizon comes a black cloud. And its made of cancer and puss and it starts sweeping all over the playground. Everyone starts screaming, clawing their eyes and pulling on their hair. And saying "Help! What do we do?!" Do you know what happens next? Out steps me. Wielding the biggest fucking shotgun you've ever seen in your life. And you know what I do? I blow every fucking thing away. And I am gettin' god's work done. And when it's all over and the dust has settled. The whole world gathers below me and says "thank you, Ronnie. Thank you for helping, being a great man, doing this for us." And you know what I say? You don't need to thank me. I'm just a guy with a gun. I'm just a cop.

POLICE EVALUATOR

Okay. That should do it. Thank you for your time Mr. Barnhardt.

RONNIE

Don't you mean Officer Barnhardt?